Saturday, June 20. 1724.

London, June 20.

Yesterday arrived the Mail from France, and two from Flanders.

Alger, May 11.

On the 5th instant, the four French Men of War that are to carry to Constantinople M. d'Andrezel, the French Ambassador, arrived at Two o'Clock in the Afternoon in our Road, where they cast Anchor. On the 9th the said Ambassador went a-shoar, and was saluted by five Guns as he passed by the Mole. In the Afternoon he went to the Dey, who had invited him by a Chiau, and who received him with great Distinction in a Gallery of the Palace; an Arm Chair was presented to him, where he sat down, and after having put on his Hat, he told the Dey all the Obligations France has laid upon the Regency of Algiers, which relieved them in their Want, and especially in the Times of Dearth: After that, he demanded Satisfaction for the Insults which several French Merchant Ships had received from their Cruisers. To this the Dey answered, That he could not satisfy him for what had passed before his Administration, but that he engaged to take Care that the like Infringements of the Treaties should not happen for the future, and that their Privateers should make full Reparation in case they should commit any Violence without his Participation. When this Conference was over, all Sorts of Refreshments were brought and served; during which, the Musick, composed of several Sorts of Instruments, was playing; after which, the Dey shew'd the Ambassador all the Apartments of his Palace, who took his Leave of him at Five o'Clock, and returned on board the Solide, one of the four Men of War, which is now making ready to let Sail the 14th to carry that Minister to Tunis. Rear Admiral Godin, who commands the five Men of War of the Dutch Squadron, came into our Road the 3d instant, and after having saluted with nine Guns, which the City did not answer no more than his other Signals, he bore off again till the 4th in the Evening, when he cast Anchor. The same Day in the Afternoon he sent an Officer a-shoar, to ask whether the Regency would hearken to Proposals of Peace; but the Dey excused himself that he could return no positive Answer for want of having then somebody about him to translate the Admiral's Letter, and as it was about the Time to shut up the Gates of the City, he referred the Matter to the next Day, the 5th, letting at the same time the said Officer know, that the Dutch might come a-shoar if they thought fit. On the 5th in the Morning, Hostages were given on both Sides, and the Officer who was charged to enter into a Treaty being introduced to the Dey, told him, that he came to propose a Peace. The Dey gave him for Answer, that the Republick of Holland had Nothing else to do but to conform to the former Capitulations, which he ordered to be brought before him. The Officer, whose Instructions were not full enough, desired that he might communicate this Proposition to the Commander of the Squadron; but as he had no Interpreter with him, and that he was obliged to make use of one of the Dey's Slaves, this Slave told the Dey quite the contrary, viz. that the Republick of Holland accepted of the Condition proposed. When the Audience was over, the Dutch Officer not knowing the Answer of the said Interpreter, retired on board his Ship, and came again the following Day, the 6th, to tell the Dey, that the Face of Affairs being changed since the last Capitulations, the Commander of the Squadron could not comply with it, and that he had only in Commission to offer a Sum of Money. The Dey, who had been imposed on the Day before by his Slave, was surprised at this sudden Change, and answered, that he would not enter into any Treaty with People that break their Word within the Space of 24 Hours; so that there was an End of the Truce, and the Dutch Squadron was obliged to make ready for sailing on the 9th in the Morning.

Paris, June 24. On the 17th instant the King's Lieutenant of Police fined several Country Bakers for false Weights, as likewise several Shopkeepers that took the Bread from the said Bakers to sell it again, contrary to the Ordinances. 'Tis said the Duke of Richelieu takes along with him to Vicona 12 Gentlemen, 12 Pages, 20 Vallets de Chambre, and 40 Footmen. The Duke of Orleans has sent one of the Gentlemen of his Bed-Chamber, to carry the Jewels and other Presents to the Princess his future Spouse. On the 21st an Arrêt was published, which allows the East-India Company the free Sale through all the Kingdom, of Indian stained or painted Handkerchiefs. An Edict has been carried to the Parliament, in order to be registered, by which private Persons are permitted to settle Rents at 30 Years Purchase; upon which the several Chambers of the Parliament met the 21st, and resolved to send Deputies to the King, humbly to beseech him, that the said Settlements might be made at 25 Years Purchase, instead of 30. The Marechal de Villeroi is expected here next Monday or Tuesday at farthest. The President d'Aligre's Apoplexy is turned to a Palsey; he will be forthwith carried to Bourbon to use the Bath there: 'Tis said that before his setting out, he will make over his Place of President à Mortier to his Son, Count de Champmellin, Commodore, who went in September last with a Squadron of Men of War to the French Islands in America, came back again to the Port of Brest on the 2d instant, and on the 21st the King nominated him Lieutenant-General of his Naval Forces. On the 11th instant died here M. Michael Amelot, Marquis de Gournay, Councillour of State, and President of the Council of Commerce, aged 69 Years and 5 Months: In 1682, the late King made him his Ambassador at Venice, from whence he was sent with the same Character to Portugal, and afterwards to the Swiss Cantons. In the Month of April 1713, his late Majesty sent him to the Court of Spain, in Quality of Am-

Am-

Ambassador Extraordinary, where he stayed till August 1709. In all which Employments, as likewise in those he has since been honoured with, he has given signal Proofs of his Capacity, Integrity, and firm Attachment to his Majesty's Service. During the Octave of Corpus Christi, his Majesty went every Day to Chapel, to assist at the Salute performed by the Chapel Musick. The Actions are at 1780 Livres, and 'tis believed that they will rise considerably, since they give 300 Livres Premium to take them at 2100 Livres the 1st of October next.
